"Payment failed. Please contact EDAS Help and reference payment #xxxx."

This message indicates that our payment processor labeled your credit card payment as being of very high risk. Since we are responsible for all charges and chargebacks, we cannot accept such high-risk payments. While the risk score is not explained to us, typical causes include:

- The payment is made from a place far away from the billing address. For example, the billing address of the credit card is in Canada, but the payment is made from a computer located in China.
- The person paying is using a free email address, such as gmail or hotmail, instead of a university or corporate email address.
- The payment is made from untraceable locations such as satellite Internet or prepaid phones.
- The country where the payment is being made has a high rate of fraudulent payments.
